CHAPTER 3

INTRODUCTION

---

Kemi sat in the WAEC examination hall on that humid May morning in 2024, staring at her English Language paper. She had scored A1 in Mathematics, B2 in Physics, and B3 in Chemistry. Her JAMB score was 287. Everything looked perfect for her admission into Ahmadu Bello University to study Medicine.

But there was one problem.

The English Language essay question read: "The youth are the leaders of tomorrow. Discuss." Kemi's mind went blank. She had practiced Mathematics equations for hours daily, memorized Chemical formulas, and solved Physics problems until midnight. But she had treated English Language as "just another subject" - something she could wing because she spoke English daily.

Three months later, Kemi received her WAEC results. Mathematics: A1. Physics: B2. Chemistry: B3. English Language: D7.

Her university admission was automatically cancelled. No Nigerian university admits students without a credit pass (C6 and above) in English Language, regardless of how brilliant you are in other subjects. Kemi had to register for WAEC again, pay NGN 36,500 for all subjects, and wait another full year.

This story repeats itself every year across Nigeria. In 2024 alone, over 180,000 students failed WAEC English Language - not because they couldn't speak English, but because they didn't understand what WAEC examiners specifically look for.
